EE-HEE-HEE! THAT TICKLES!
CLUCK! CLUCK!
I WANT RESULTS! GOOD RESULTS... OR ELSE!
I'LL DO SOME RESEARCH, O KING!
SO...
COMEST THOU NOT TO BED, WACKY?
NAY! NOT TILL I SUCCEED!
AHA! HEX-RECIPES BY KNEUMOS, COURT MAGICIAN OF KING THEO MAYBE...
BUT NARY A WORD ABOUT SCEPTERS!
EH? THE CANDLE'S HEAT BRINGETH OUT INVISIBLE INK WRITING BETWEEN THE LINES!

OH, HAPPY HOCUS! IT'S THE HEX FORMULA FOR A MAGIC SCEPTER!
SO WACKY HAPPILY CONCOCTETH THE FORMULA...
AND THE NEXT DAY...

During this period in History, which will probably be called "The Middle Ages" by some later historians, everyone who is anyone has a castle. It is essential, since the favorite sports of the gentry are war and hunting. If two barons quarrel, no one calls in the local police to settle the matter for there are no local police. So the barons settle it between themselves, which means that one baron attacks the castle of the second baron. If this happens, the second baron is happy to have a wall. The very earliest castles were built on high ground, and the protective walls were really palisades of logs. These were sort of hard to get over. Later on, the walls were built of stone, with watchtowers at the corners and walkways along the top. The walkways were very handy and they still are. They permit the besieged people in the castle to drop heavy objects on the folk outside the wall. This arrangement pleases all but the folk outside.

The only really livable room in these old castles is the great hall. It is livable because it has a fireplace. Ladies spend a great deal of time in their own special quarters . . . called bowers. Bowers have a decided disadvantage . . . no fireplaces.

Bathing has not always been a big thing with the people of our time . . . and it still is not. In fact, it is reported with some awe that one of England's queens is a big fanatic for cleanliness. She takes a bath once a month (whether she needs it or not). But then, like other men and women, she must have a lot of perfume to use.

Glass has been around for thousands of years, and many barons used it in their castles, but it is extremely expensive; so many people use oiled cloth or horn to seal their windows. Those who are rich enough to have glass windows usually take them along if they move. This may be one of the reasons very few people move.

Without ready entertainment (such as the radio, television and movies, which will probably come to be someday) things get boring in the great halls of the big castles. Any wandering minstrel is always sure of a warm welcome. And any minstrel who is worthy of the name plays the flute or the harp and he sings of the deeds of the great heroes. The "Song of Roland" has been a big hit for years, and the mighty tales of King Arthur always play to standing room. His deeds are super hits!

Covered dishes are very popular now. For one thing, all the cooking is done in an outbuilding, away from the great hall; and even the most patient baron likes his dinner served warm. For another, there is always the chance that an enemy might infiltrate the castle; so if the server keeps the cover on the dish of food, no one can slip a spot of poison into the stew.

Wall-to-wall carpeting has not become the thing to have in an ancient castle. Instead, floors are covered with rushes. The rushes are not changed very often, and are probably not very sanitary; but since no one cares very much about germs, no one worries much about it. Every castle has its pack of dogs who can be relied upon to snatch up bones and bits of meat which are dropped on the floor. This helps in keeping things a lot tidier than they might otherwise be . . . and it saves a lot of hard work.

That is all for this day, Dear Diary . . . meanwhile . . . I'm living HISTORY!

The sport a boy grows up with... shooting a Daisy®

"In training youngsters to play baseball, there is simply no substitute for practice. The same applies to shooting a Daisy B·B gun.

Practice makes you a better shooter. And when you start hitting bullseyes, it gives you a real sense of satisfaction. I know, because I've been hitting bullseyes with Daisy B·B guns for over 35 years.

Now I'm teaching my son Marc to shoot. Right from the start, he's developing coordination and skills that will help him in any sport. At the same time, he's gaining the confidence that will help him grow up to be the man he wants to be."

—Dick Williams
